Spirit away

Article Talk

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

In English, to "spirit away" means to remove without anyone's noticing.

In Japanese folklore, spiriting away (Japanese: Kamikakushi (神隠し), lit. 'hidden by kami') refers to the mysterious disappearance or death of a person, after they had angered the gods (kami). There are numerous legends of humans being abducted to the spirit world by kami. Folklorist Kunio Yanagita recorded several tales of kamikakushi in Tōno Monogatari (遠野物語, Tōno Tales, 1909).^[1]

The duo were inseparable, hence the adage "Jiao doesn't leave Meng and Meng doesn't leave Jiao." Folk tales tell a story of the two men starting out as bandits who later reformed their ways. But their indelible past meant they could not enter people's homes, and instead only kept watch of poultry and livestock.

The door god Guan Yu is the exception to the pairing tradition.

A general during the Three Kingdoms period (220-280), he ~~was immortalized~~ in the classic novel "Romance of the Three Kingdoms." Guan Yu is renowned for his strong beliefs and is regarded as an epitome of loyalty.

A Chinese police television drama has won praise from viewers for its portrayal of gang-related crimes and corruption, a long-standing social issue that has been the target of authorities for years.

With an award-winning cast, "The Knockout" tells the story of a police officer's 20-year journey combating the criminal underworld and people involved in gangs. The series, which has received a rating of 9 out of 10 on review platform Douban, was one of the most discussed topics on social media during the Spring Festival holiday, with many applauding the show's plot and performances.

> In contrast to most other dramas in the genre that generally focus on the severity of crimes, "The Knockout" tries to address the underlying issues that lead to people committing crimes. For example, instead of entirely focusing on a gang's ringleader, the plot delves into his backstory as a cash-strapped fisherman who gets into shady business dealings after struggling to make ends meet.

Real Estate Slump Pushes China Baowu Steel to Speed Up Overseas Expansion

The state-owned steelmaker plans to kick off construction of multiple projects, after the domestic industry was hobbled by the sharp decline in property construction last year

In Depth: What's Worrying

China's Luxury Market Contracts for First Time in Five Years

Slowing economy and "zero Covid" sapped 2022 demand for travel and consumption, but Bain & Co. sees rebound this year

A Gucci store in Shanghai on Feb. 2, 2023.

China's luxury market contracted 10% in 2022, ending a five-year streak of growth as Beijing's "zero-Covid" policy and a slowing economy hit spending, Bain & Co. said Tuesday in a report.

Repeated Covid-related lockdowns starting in the second quarter curbed travel and consumption, with shopping mall traffic falling by 30% to 35%, the management consulting company said.

Has the economic crisis finally hit spending among the rich?

That's one reading of a profits warning from Burberry this morning, which has sent the luxury goods maker's shares tumbling this morning.

Burberry admitted that sales has slowed in recent weeks, and that it would only hit the "lower end" of profit expectations.

While both fund managers and distributors make more money from the expansion, it's the latter that are getting the bigger slice of the pie

China's mutual fund market has seen rapid growth in the past few years, thanks to retail investors' increasing affluence and the ease that new streamlined sales channels bring — allowing people to make purchases with merely a few clicks on their smartphones.

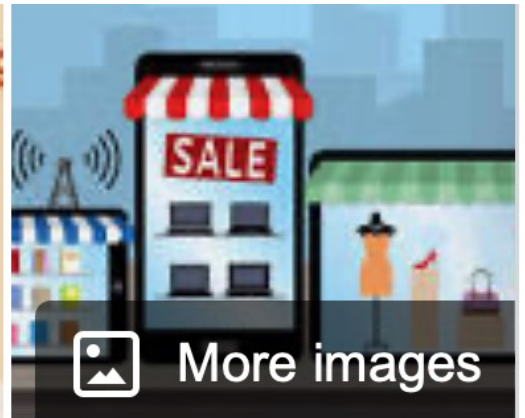

As of December, total assets under management (AUM) in mutual funds reached 26.03 trillion yuan ($3.85 trillion), almost doubling the amount three years earlier, data compiled by the Asset Management Association of China (AMAC) show.
